The AMIDEX35 Israel Mutual Fund is not diversified and is composed of only 35 companies. All investments are inherently subject to market risk. The relatively limited liquidity of some of the equities in the portfolio may effect the Fund's ability to acquire desired positions quickly or ability to dispose of securities at a desirable price and time. The Fund invests in Israeli companies and is therefore subject to special risks. The Fund has a high industry concentration in Israeli securities, which could entail greater risk than a fund with more diversified holdings. For instance, market conditions, interest rates, or economic and regulatory developments can significantly affect an issuer, an industry, or even a group of related industries, more adversely than other securities in the market as a whole. These factors may affect the value of your investment.

"The Tel Aviv stock exchange vs. the S&P500 over the last 5 years."

The TA25 and S&P500 Indexes are not investment products available for purchase. The TA25 is comprised of the most liquid and most highly capitalized stocks traded on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange. The S&P 500 is an index created by Standard & Poor's Corp considered to represent the performance of the stock market generally.

The Index Methodology
We don't try to "time" or "outguess" the market. Our index methodology results in lower portfolio turnover and potentially lower capital gain taxes.
